3D Printing: A New Frontier for Indian Manufacturing

India's growing confidence in digital systems is extending into the physical world-into how products are designed, materials are used and manufacturing is organised. Additive manufacturing (AM), commonly referred to as 3D printing, is an important part of this transition.

From complex rocket engine components to customised medical implants, AM is expanding the possibilities of indigenous production. Its significance extend beyond a new way of making objects. It brings together computing, electronics, digital design and materials science, creating an opportunity for India to strengthen technological self-reliance and develop a workforce equipped for the next generation of manufacturing.

The National Strategy for Additive Manufacturing (NSAM), introduced in 2022, provides the framework for this effort. Under the strategy, more than 1,54,000 individuals have been trained, 56 start-ups have been supported and the development of 65 India-specific technologies have been enabled. With NSAM 2.0 being conceptualised, the focus is turning towards wider adoption, commercialisation and stronger domestic capabilities.

For India's youth, this evolving landscape deserves attention. A national manufacturing ambition becomes meaningful when young people can acquire the skills, experience and entrepreneurial confidence to participate in it.

From Digital Idea to Physical Object

Conventional manufacturing often involves cutting, drilling or machining material to obtain a desired shape. Additive manufacturing builds an object through successive layers of material, guided by a digital design.

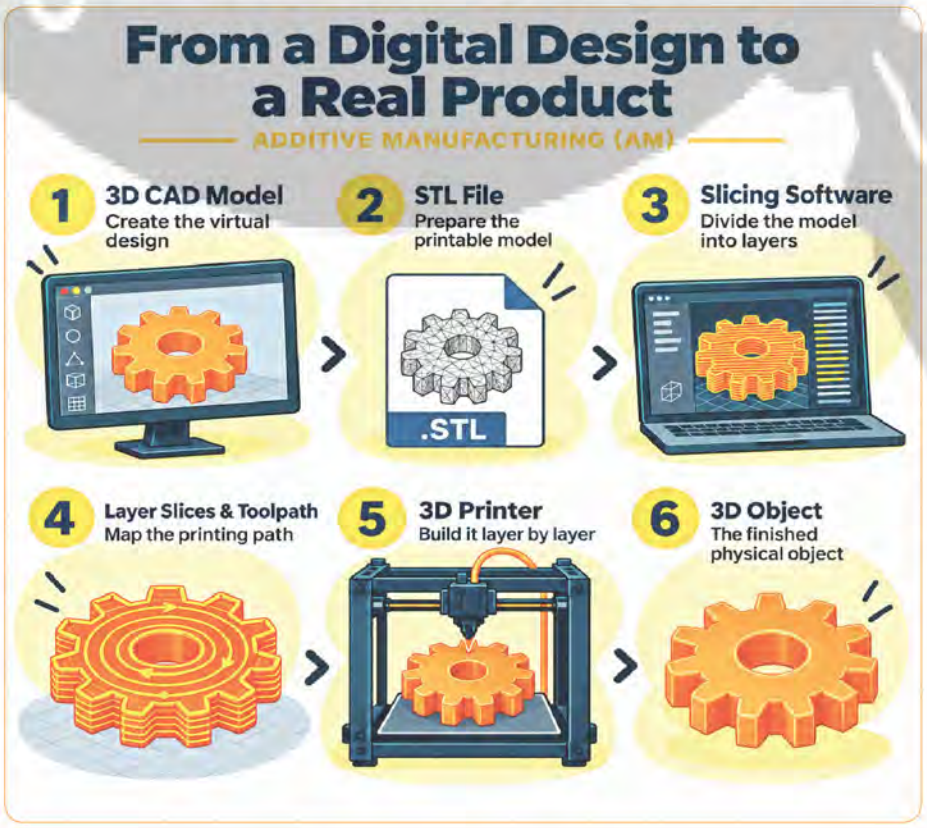

The process begins with a three-dimensional model created using Computer-Aided Design (CAD) software or captured through a 3D scanner. The model is prepared in a suitable file format, and slicing software divides it into layers while generating instructions for the machine. The printer then builds the object according to these instructions. Depending on the process and application, the printed component may require cleaning, curing, heat treatment, machining or other finishing operations before inspection and use.

This integration of digital design and physical production gives AM its distinctive strength. It can enable complex shapes, customised products and faster design iterations. Its advantages depend on choosing the right application, material and process.

The range of materials also makes the technology relevant across industries. Thermoplastics such as PLA, ABS and polycarbonate support applications including models, prototypes and functional parts. Metals and alloys, including stainless steel and titanium, enable more demanding engineering applications. Ceramics offer possibilities in specialised industrial and medical uses, while biomaterials and bio-inks are opening research avenues in tissue engineering.

Reshaping Important Sectors of the Economy

India's AM capabilities are finding expression across sectors where design complexity, performance and indigenous development matter.

In space and aerospace, the technology can help produce intricate components and reduce the need to assemble multiple parts. The May 2024 launch of Agnikul Cosmos's Agnibaan-SOrTeD, featuring a single-piece, additively manufactured semi-cryogenic engine demonstrates how advanced manufacturing can support an Indian start-up in developing sophisticated space hardware.

In defence, applications extend from construction to maintenance, repair and overhaul. The Indian Army's use of 3D-printed buildings illustrates the potential for faster construction, while workshop-level AM capabilities could support the development and repair of selected components.

Healthcare offers another compelling application, manufacturing products suited to individual anatomy. The backgrounder describes work on silk-based implants and indigenous bioceramic bone grafts. These developments connect domestic technology creation with the need for more personalised medical solutions.

In electronics, government-supported centres are developing capabilities in printed components and advanced applications including batteries, antennas, capacitors and photonics, indicating that AM's scope extends well beyond familiar plastic models.

The construction industry is also exploring on-site printing and alternative materials. The expected outcomes include shorter construction periods and potential improvements in material use and logistics. The scale of these benefits will depend on the building design, material, location and production method.

Together, these applications show why India is pursuing AM as a strategic capability. Each successful application can strengthen domestic expertise and create demand for the people needed to develop, operate and improve it.

3D Printing: A New Frontier for Indian Manufacturing

The National Strategy

The Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology released the National Strategy for Additive Manufacturing in February 2022. Aligned with Make in India and Atmanirbhar Bharat, it seeks to connect government, industry, academia and research institutions in developing indigenous technologies and encouraging adoption.

The strategy's objectives included:

- Developing 50 India-specific technologies covering materials, machines, processes and software.
- Nurturing 100 new additive manufacturing start-ups.
- Developing 500 AM products.
- Building capabilities across 10 existing and emerging manufacturing sectors.
- Developing one lakh skilled personnel.

The strategy's key feature is its emphasis on building the entire ecosystem. India needs capability in the materials fed into machines, the machines themselves, the software that guides production and the processes that determine quality. Seven specialised Development and Deployment Centres supporting research, skilling and hands-on technology access were envisioned. Such infrastructure can help connect laboratory knowledge with industrial needs and give innovators access to expertise and equipment.

The National Additive Manufacturing Symposium provides another platform for coordination. According to the backgrounder, its second edition, held on March 13, 2026, brought together policymakers, industry, start-ups and research institutions to discuss adoption, partnerships and the proposed next phase of the strategy.

Early exposure is also being encouraged through Atal Tinkering Labs, where school students can encounter 3D printing alongside robotics and other technologies. This helps introduce a valuable habit: approaching technology as something to understand, experiment with and build.

India's Next Ambition

India is building a broader base of skills, entrepreneurship and indigenous technology. Training numbers exceed the original one-lakh objective, and the reported 65 India-specific technologies exceed the initial target of 50. Start-up support has reached 56 enterprises.These figures indicate satisfactory progress. The larger challenge is to translate capability into commercially viable products, sustained industrial adoption and employment.

NSAM 2.0, which is being conceptualised, seeks to advance that transition. Proposed priorities include stronger intellectual property generation, digital integration of the AM network and the commercialisation of globally competitive technologies.

The proposed phase also envisages improving the affordability of machines and materials through clusters, strengthening the electronics value chain, expanding the start-up base and supporting defence applications. Sustainability-focused pilots and international cooperation in standards, research and technology partnerships are additional priorities.

The direction is clear: India seeks to move from building capacity towards using that capacity more widely and competitively.

Careers: Where Young People Can Enter the AM Economy

For young people, additive manufacturing offers several possible career routes. The opportunities extend across the journey from identifying a need to delivering a finished product.

Design and product development: CAD designers and engineers create digital models and adapt components for additive manufacturing. Design for Additive Manufacturing requires understanding how geometry, material and process affect performance, cost and printability.

Production and technical operations: Technicians prepare machines, manage materials, set up print jobs, monitor production and troubleshoot problems. Maintenance skills are important for keeping equipment reliable.

Post-processing and quality assurance: Printed parts often need finishing and inspection. Roles may involve dimensional measurement, surface finishing, testing, documentation and checking whether a component meets its intended specifications.

Materials and process research: Graduates and researchers in materials science, metallurgy, chemistry and related disciplines can contribute to developing feedstocks, improving processes and understanding component behaviour.

Software, electronics and automation: AM systems need controls, monitoring and digital workflows. Computing and electronics skills can support machine development, process automation and production analysis.

Applications and entrepreneurship: Application engineers help customers identify useful AM applications. Entrepreneurs may build businesses around prototyping, specialised design, manufacturing aids, customised products or selected components.

Engineering students can build on mechanical, manufacturing, electronics, computing or materials knowledge. Diploma holders and ITI-trained candidates can explore technical operations, maintenance and finishing through relevant practical training. Industrial design students can connect creative ability with product development.

Students should explore facilities at their institutions, AM centres, incubators and industrial training providers, checking current eligibility and access. Before choosing a paid course, they should examine its practical content, equipment availability and opportunities to complete meaningful projects.

For aspiring entrepreneurs, additive manufacturing can lower some of the barriers between an idea and a marketable product. It enables rapid prototyping, allowing founders to test designs, incorporate customer feedback and refine products before committing to larger investments. In suitable applications, it can reduce the need for expensive tooling and make small-batch production and customisation commercially attractive. This opens opportunities to serve specialised markets, offer design and prototyping services, and develop innovative products. By matching these capabilities with clear customer needs, young entrepreneurs can build businesses that compete through speed, flexibility and ingenuity.

Towards a Viksit Bharat

Additive manufacturing brings together several national priorities: indigenous innovation, advanced manufacturing, entrepreneurship and skill development. Where appropriately applied, it can also support resource efficiency, customised production and more flexible manufacturing.

India's progress will depend on making these capabilities useful at scale. That requires sustained research, industrial partnerships, accessible training and a workforce able to turn digital designs into dependable products.

For young people, the opportunity is practical and compelling: learn how things are designed, understand how they are made and develop the ability to improve them. As India builds its additive manufacturing ecosystem, young people with these capabilities can help shape both their own careers and the country's manufacturing future.

ECI Orders Special Summary Revision of Electoral Rolls in 17 States, UTs

The Election Commission of India (ECI) has directed 17 States and Union Territories to conduct a Special Summary Revision (SSR) of electoral rolls, with January 1, 2027, as the qualifying date. The qualifying date determines a citizen's eligibility for voter registration, meaning those who turn 18 on or before January 1, 2027, can apply for enrolment. The exercise will cover Assam, Bihar, Gujarat, Kerala, Madhya Pradesh, Rajasthan, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh, West Bengal and eight other States and UTs. The revision aims to ensure that all eligible citizens are enrolled while ineligible entries are excluded. Citizens turning 18 by April 1, July 1 or October 1, 2027, can also submit advance applications for registration. Unlike the Special Intensive Revision, the exercise will not involve house-to-house visits by Booth Level Officers. District-level help desks will facilitate enrolment, particularly for migrants and vulnerable groups. The Commission said the revision schedule for other States and UTs would be announced separately.

Government Mandates Caller Name Display from November 1

The Department of Telecommunications (DoT) has directed telecom operators to introduce the Calling Name Presentation (CNAP) service across India from November 1, 2026, to help users identify unknown callers and reduce fraudulent and spam calls. Under the new system, the caller's name, as registered in the telecom operator's subscriber database, will appear alongside the phone number, even if the number is not saved in the recipient's contacts. Calls from unsaved international numbers will be identified as 'International Call'. The service will be activated automatically for all users on 4G and 5G networks without requiring a separate request. Its introduction on 2G, 3G and landline networks will be considered separately. Telecom operators will also be required to implement safeguards to protect subscribers' personal information.

Cabinet Approves Social Assistance Outlay, Railway Bonus, IDBI Bank Stake Sale

The Union Cabinet and the Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs (CCEA) on 14 October 2026 approved key decisions. The Cabinet cleared the continuation of the National Social Assistance Programme for five years, from 2026–27 to 2030–31, with an outlay of Rs. 53,428 crore. Renamed the Pradhan Mantri Samajik Sahayata Yojana, the programme is expected to benefit 3.2 crore people across all States and Union Territories. The decision also revises eligibility for disability pension, reducing the benchmark disability threshold from 80 per cent to 40 per cent, while old-age and widow pension schemes and the family benefit scheme will continue in their existing form. In another decision, the Cabinet approved a productivity-linked bonus equivalent to 78 days' wages for 11.4 lakh railway employees, involving an expenditure of approximately Rs. 2,010 crore. The CCEA also approved the strategic sale of a 60.72 per cent stake in IDBI Bank for Rs. 52,877.07 crore. The proposed transaction comprises a 30.48 per cent stake held by the Government of India and a 30.24 per cent stake held by the Life Insurance Corporation of India, marking a significant step in the government's disinvestment programme.

India Amends Mauritius Tax Treaty to Curb Tax Avoidance

The Government of India has notified amendments to the India-Mauritius Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement (DTAA), introducing a Principal Purpose Test (PPT) to prevent tax avoidance. Under the revised agreement, tax benefits can be denied if securing those benefits is found to be one of the main purposes of a transaction or arrangement. The measure aims to prevent companies and investors from misusing the treaty to obtain unintended tax advantages while ensuring that the same income is not taxed twice. India and Mauritius signed the amendment protocol in March 2024, and it came into force on September 10, 2026, following completion of legal formalities by both countries.

India Seeks Inclusion of Terrorism in Crimes Against Humanity Convention

India has called for terrorist acts that qualify as crimes against humanity to be included in the proposed international convention on the prevention and punishment of such crimes. Addressing the UN General Assembly's Sixth Committee, Ms. R. Mythili, Counsellor at India's Permanent Mission to the UN, stressed that countries must retain primary responsibility for protecting citizens, prosecuting grave violations and ensuring justice for victims while safeguarding the rights of the accused. She also emphasised that measures to prevent and punish crimes against humanity must respect national sovereignty and the principle of non-interference in internal affairs. The proposed convention, aimed at strengthening international cooperation to prevent and punish widespread or systematic attacks against civilians, is expected to be adopted at an international conference in 2028.

Indian Embassy Issues Advisory Amid Security Tensions in Saudi Arabia

The Indian Embassy in Riyadh has issued a safety advisory for Indian nationals amid heightened security concerns and disruptions to air travel in Saudi Arabia following aerial attacks involving missiles and drones. The advisory comes after an attack at Riyadh airport on October 10, in which several Indian nationals were injured. Of those injured, two remain in intensive care, one is in a high-dependency unit and three are in a general ward, while one has been discharged. The Embassy has urged Indians to follow local authorities' instructions, remain indoors during aerial attacks and refrain from filming or sharing information about missile interceptions and impact sites, which could invite legal action. Flight operations remain suspended at Riyadh's King Khalid International Airport, while services at Dammam, Jeddah and Medina continue with disruptions. Indian airlines have suspended flights to and from Saudi Arabia as of October 16. Travellers, including Umrah pilgrims, have been advised to prepare for sudden flight cancellations and consider alternative routes where necessary.
